The new Straits Restaurant is a lot like its co-owner Chris "Ludacris" Bridges: unique, diverse and very sexy. With a $1 million facelift (for the restaurant, not 'Luda'), this former home of Spice features vibrant reds and rich browns, two fireplaces and plenty of space for indulging in the exotic Singaporean dishes (a mix of Malaysian, Indonesian, Chinese and Indian) from hot L.A. chef Chris Yeo. Both are celeb magnets so expect a sighting or two. And don't forget to try Ludacris' fave menu pick: the kung pao lollipops made of chicken with crushed peanuts and jalapeño.
